The Inclusive Leader

From our thought leader partner 10,000 Feet

Create a lively discussion, generate awareness, and reinforce learning with two interconnected, game-based experiences.

Introduce serious concepts in a fun and engaging manner.

What it means to have an inclusive mindset, and why it's good for business

Key Outcomes

- Brings to life what it means to be an Inclusive Leader and how to Maximize the Mix
- Builds inclusive management/leadership capabilities
- Creates awareness of what it means to have an inclusive mindset
- Makes the business case for inclusion
- Applies diversity and inclusion principles to day-to-day management challenges and opportunities
- Reinforces fair and effective people management practices
- Increases productivity and performance by helping managers create work environments where all employees are able to contribute and achieve their goals
- Focuses on simple things managers can do to be more inclusive

Learning Approach

- Two interconnected game-based experiences that create lively discussion, debate, awareness and learning
- Creates a positive learning experience by introducing serious content in a fun, engaging way
- Involves all participants in a small and large group learning process that itself makes the case for the importance of diverse perspectives and experiences
- Discovery learning takes place through table and plenary discussions combined with light playful competition
- Appeals to all learning styles and engages everyone
- Accommodates 12 to 100 in a single 3-4 hour workshop
- Potential for customized information and scenarios that reflect company-specific cross-cultural realities, organizational work environment challenges, key inclusion goals, etc.
- Train-the-trainer options available

For additional information about The Inclusive Leader, visit Advantage Performance Group, call us at (415) 925-6832 or email contact@advantageperformance.com. Explore our free resources at apg1.us/free.

10,000 FEET

perspective changes everything